THE BOARD OF CONTROL

the Black River Improvement Matter and Action Upon the Cheboygan and Cross Village State Road Bids Laid Over Until the Next Meeting

A telegram from Mr. Chandler states that the Board of Control, at their meeting in Lansing last Wednesday, did not close the contract for the Black river improvement, requiring that the company furnish complete plans and speciloations of the proposed work before they would do so, and the matter was laid over until their next regular meeting to give the company time to prepare the same. We regret this delay in getting the contract closed, but presume the Board did what they considered the r duty to the state in thus putting it over The work is an important one, and we would like to see it going forward as fast as possible. We do not think there is anything further than the requirement above mentioned, in the way of the contract between the state and company being made, and while the plans and specifications are being perfected, the company can be making arrangements for doing the work, so that this delay may not be a serious matter after all. From the well known enterprise of the gentlemen who control the company, we have no doubt but that they will do all they can to push the improvement through as fast as possible. The same telegram states that the Board also deferred action upon the bids for constructing the eastern division of the Chebovgan and Cross Village state road until their next meeting. We also regret this delay very much, as this is a much needed road in our county, and it is the second time there has been delay in letting the contract. The road should be built this season if possible, as that part of the county

Four months ago the insane wife of Adam Dagenkolb, living four miles from Northport, mysteriously disappeared, and was supposed to have been lost in the woods. No trace of her ever having been found, foul play was finally suspected, and on Sunday last a large crowd of citizens gathered at Dagenkolb's place to make an investigation. An old well recently filled up attracted their attention and they began to dig fi out, when Dagenkolb made an excuse to go up stairs and change his coat, but not returning he was looked after and was found to have cut his throat from ear to ear with a table knife. Digging out the well was continued, and finally the body of Mrs. Dagenkolb was found wrapped in a shawl at the bottom of the well, with the throat cut. She had been murdered by the husband, who suicided when the discovery of his crime became inevitable.
